Largemouth bass fisheries get a helping hand from the AGFC

LITTLE ROCK – Arkansas's largemouth bass fisheries are getting a helping hand from the Arkansas Game and Fish Commission. So far this year, the AGFC has stocked over 1 million fingerling Florida-strain largemouth bass in Arkansas's public waters.

The fingerlings were produced at the Andrew Hulseley State Fish Hatchery located on Lake Hamilton just south of Hot Springs. The Hulseley hatchery is the AGFC's only hatchery that produces Florida-strain largemouth bass, according to the hatchery's manager, Don Brader. "In three of the last four years over one million Florida bass fingerlings have been raised and stocked by the Hulseley hatchery," Brader explains.

Fingerling bass produced in 2009 averaged two inches in length and were stocked into 13 waterbodies including lakes Atkins, Chicot, Columbia, Conway, DeGray, Erling, Gurdon, Lester Sites Bois d'Arc, Lower White Oak, Marion McCollum Greenlee, Millwood, Monticello and Ouachita.

AGFC fisheries biologists, along with bass angling volunteers, distributed the fish into areas of good habitat around each lake by boat to increase their survival rate, the AGFC's black bass program supervisor Colton Dennis says. "The Brushy Creek arm of Lake DeGray and the Rabbittail/Buckville area of Lake Ouachita were stocked with approximately 100,000 Florida bass fingerlings each as part of an ongoing eight-year research project to introduce Florida bass genes into these populations," Dennis said.

In addition, 241 adult Florida bass previously used as brood stock at the Hulseley hatchery were distributed among lakes Atkins, Columbia,

Conway and Lester Sites Bois d'Arc, Brader said. "These five year old brood stock ranging in size from 2 to 5 pounds were no longer needed on the hatchery for spawning purposes and will be replaced by younger fish currently maintained on the hatchery," he said.

Annual stockings of fingerling bass from the hatchery are necessary to maintain Florida genes in a lake's bass population. Florida strain largemouth bass under the right environmental conditions can exhibit faster growth rates than their northern cousins after the age of three. In addition, female Florida strain largemouth bass have the potential to grow to trophy size (greater than 10 pounds) in suitable habitats in Arkansas.

AGFC deer hunting seminars scheduled

LITTLE ROCK – Want to learn how to hunt deer in Arkansas? The Arkansas Game and Fish Commission will be hosting several deer hunting seminars across the state in preparation for one of Arkansas's most popular hunting seasons.

The clinics will help avid hunters and those new to the sport pick up a few pointers for the upcoming season. AGFC wildlife biologists will be on hand to answer questions.

Topics scheduled for seminars include:

- History of deer in Arkansas
- Regulation changes for the upcoming season
- Best places in Arkansas to go deer hunting
- 2009-2010 deer season forecast
- How to age deer
- Deer antler scoring
- Food plots
- Deer management
- Preseason preparation
- Arkansas Hunters Feeding the Hungry
- Deer hunting safety

All seminars will be held from 6:30 p.m. to 9 p.m. at the following locations:

Aug. 24..... AGFC Central Office building in Little Rock
 Aug. 27..... Forrest L. Wood Crowley's Ridge Nature Center in Jonesboro
 Sept. 1..... Janet Huckabee Arkansas River Valley Nature Center in Fort Smith
 Sept. 3..... Gov. Mike Huckabee Delta Rivers Nature Center in Pine Bluff
 Sept. 8..... Fair Park Community Center in Hope

For more information call (800) 364- 4263 or visit www.agfc.com for details.

Public meetings scheduled for 2010 spring turkey regulations

LITTLE ROCK – The Arkansas Game and Fish Commission wants to hear from turkey hunters. The agency is looking for feedback from hunters as the AGFC begins the process of setting the 2010 spring turkey hunting regulations.

The meetings will be held Aug. 25 from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. There will be 11 public meetings held around the state that will give turkey hunters their chance to have a voice in the Arkansas Game and Fish Commission's annual regulations process.

To find out more about the AGFC's proposals for the 2010 spring turkey hunting season, go to www.agfc.com, then attend one of the public meetings. If you're not able to attend one of these meetings, comment online or by phone at (800) 364-GAME (4263). You may also mail your comments to AGFC, Attn: Spring Turkey Regulations, 2 Natural Resources Dr., Little Rock, AR 72205. Your comments must reach the AGFC by Sept. 30.

While you're commenting on the proposals, take a moment and sign up for the Conservation for Arkansas Network. CAN is a database of anglers, hunters and conservationists who care about Arkansas's outdoors. Give us your email address and interests in the outdoors, and we will send direct emails about what's important to you. You'll be among the first people to know about the latest public meetings, possible regulations changes, hunting permit applications and special events held by the AGFC. Just visit the Conservation for Arkansas Network link at www.agfc.com/wildlife-conservation/can.aspx and follow the online instructions. Your voice matters; make sure we hear it.

Greg Butts steers state parks to new heights of popularity

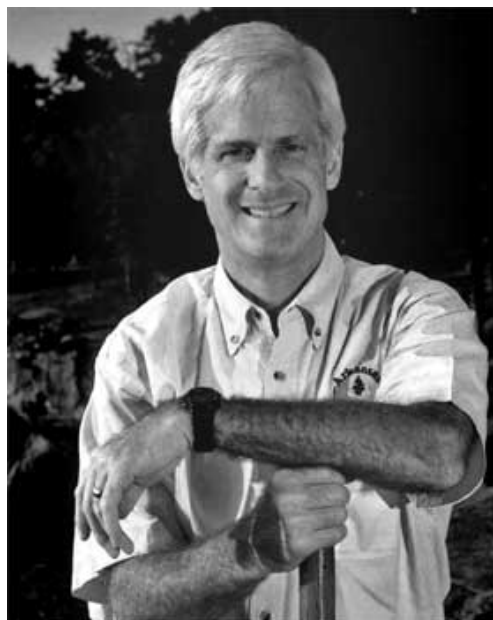

LITTLE ROCK – New York newspaper editor Horace Greeley long ago advised, “Go west, young man.” Greg Butts, though, left his upstate New York home and went south.

After he received a degree in recreation and resource management from West Virginia University, Butts landed a job as a park planner with Arkansas State Parks in 1973. That was a boom time for the park system, a surge of expansion and improvement under Governor Dale Bumpers after years of little growth. Butts moved up and ahead and has been director of Arkansas State Parks for 19 years now. t>

Butts of Little Rock joins Cheryl and Bert Haralson of Augusta and Tommy Sanders of Little Rock as 2009 inductees into the Arkansas Outdoor Hall of Fame. The annual Outdoor Hall of Fame banquet and fund raising will be Friday, Sept. 11, at Statehouse Convention Center in Little Rock.

The growth of Arkansas parks in the 1970s was followed by gradual belt tightening to the point of major concern in the 1990s. Money for development disappeared right along with essential funds for routine maintenance and operation.

The solution came forth in 1993 when Arkansas State Parks joined the Arkansas Game and Fish Commission in a quest for permanent funding in the form of a fractional sales tax. A court decision delayed the campaign, then new Governor Mike Huckabee stepped up with leaders like Butts to urge the passage of the conservational sales tax in November 1996. The measure won, and on July 1, 1997, financial aid for the parks for AGFC, the Arkansas Department of Natural Heritage and Keep Arkansas Beautiful began coming in from Arkansas residents.

The state parks, always popularity with Arkansans even in the lean times, are seeing new fervor, Butts said. "It's the reconnect thing. Arkansas is regarded as a rural state, but more than half of our people live in cities now. They are using the parks as a means of reconnecting with nature."

These park users aren't just campers or just daytime picnickers. In a recent year's time, the park system put on 54,000 activities and events, with attendance totaling more than three-quarters of a million people, Butts said.

The reconnect element has spread into new fields like geocaching, a new game with legions of enthusiasts. Park users can try camping before they buy equipment and specialized vehicles though the Rent-A-Camp, Rent-an-RV, Rent-a-Yurt and Rent-A-Tepee programs. Impressive new visitors centers feature interpretive exhibits at Lake Dardanelle State Park, at Cossatot State Park and at Hobbs State Park-Conservation Area. Along with traditional information avenues, the parks are reaching citizens through social networks on the Internet, Butts said.

After Butts moved to Arkansas, he was involved in the creation of Pinnacle Mountain, Cane Creek, Louisiana Purchase and Toltec Mounds state parks. He earned a master's degree from the University of Arkansas and married his wife Ann. They have two daughters, Anna and Christina.
